

The topic of the diploma thesis is „The Pupil's Interest in Schoolwork". In fact, the study is a summary of qualitative and quantitative analysis's results and conclusions, which was realized on comprehensive grammar school students of tercia and quarta grades. Social-psychologic methods, such as questionnaire, dialog and essay analysis, were used to gain the information. The goal of the research was the pupil's schoolwork interest mapping by finding an attitude to school subjects of the tercia and quarta grades students. The work can also be considered as a sequel of Pavelkova's study from 2003, who investigated the same problem into elementary school pupils of 8th and 9th grades. Therefore, it makes room for the study results comparison of the age-matched responders attending two different educational institutions. The work consists of three parts. The first part defines the theoretic methods of investigation, it establishes and explains ‚The Attitude' term and there is the theme of pupil's attitude to school subjects presented as well, based on exact literature. We can find here the study goal statement too, the description of it's progress and used methods. In the second part there are questionnaire results statistically modified into tables, these are compared with Pavelkova's (2003) results, then evaluated by classification scales and added by commentaries. The third and last part of the work shows the presented research information outputs, which represent mentioned examined group of subjects and generalize gathered data.