

A theme of God's mercy in the Holy Scripture and making it contemporary in st. s. Faustyna Kowalska's message

This work concerns a theme of God's mercy first of all from the point of view of its different manifestation. It is an attempt to show a coincidence or a resemblance of the God's mercy introduced by the Holy Scriptures and st. s. Faustyna Kowalska's diary.

After an opening part and a Brief explanation of notions "mercy" and "merciful" this work introduces an extensive part pointing out that the meaning commented notions is far deeper than it seems to be at the first sight. Therefore the contents of the central part are the chapters talking about some different expression of God's mercies completed with some passages quoted from the Holy Scripture and the Diary.

The work is aimed to present a certain resemblance between the biblical texts' and st. s. Faustyna Kowalska's diary's statements about God's mercy. The work tries to offer a wider look to God's goodness, the long living true testified by immense quantity of the biblical texts and the st. s. Faustyn's diary first of all commemorating the righteous words from her preface, what says: "Lord has chosen her to honor the memory for the message of His mercy to nowadays people. "
