

Architectural progress in the 20's of the 20th century in Czechoslovakia was very complicated. Lot of tendencies came together at once, but finally majority of architects decided to prefer functionalism. They appealed to his founder, Swiss architect Le Corbusier. He inspired his work by many architectural fundamentals of antique Greece and Rome. Czechoslovak architects followed his thoughts and tried to use ancient modalities in combination with brand new materials.