

This work deals shortly with the most common textile materials used in antiquity, then it turns to history of the dyer's craft, process of dyeing and various mordants and dye-stuffs used. Fuller's work is also described. One of the main parts of this work is a section in which particular dye-stuffs are divided by the colour they produce on fabrics. The work also includes a practical part.