

This thesis is focused on the life of young people in the 50's of 20th century in Czechoslovakia and on the possibility of its self-realisation through the young organizations controlled by the communist regime.

In the first part I am going to define communism, social and cultural environment in the 50's and I will try to build an overview of the youth organisations and their characteristics.

The aim of this research through questionnaires is to create an impartial view over the social life of young people orientated on the organized activity.
