

Graduation theses „Prostitution as a psychological and social problem“ is about prostitution and related issues in a social area. In my theoretical part I concentrated to prostitution from a historical perspective where we can see a major changes in a view of its operation. Also it contains definitions of basics concepts related to the topic. In addition to this I focused to problems associated with prostitution in a form of criminal behavior also in a form of impact on psychosocial development of persons attend to commercial sex. I concentrate to reasons of inception of this behavior.

In a research part I tried to use my theoretical knowledge used in this work and find out what is the view of young people on issues of commercial sexual abusing. I created a questionnaire by which I managed to determine what is the subconsciousness of students of Hussite Theological Faculty in mentioned issue and what is their experience in this area.

In the end of my work I summarized the results of my theoretical and research part and tried to propose solutions.
