

This diploma thesis has theoretical and empirical nature and its objective is to map an extent of opportunities for development of clients of institutional upbringing in the Czech society. The theoretical part is consisting of views on current issues of institutional upbringing and it is completed by outline of new solutions through the analysis methodological materials. The empirical part consists of a survey of current options for supporting clients of institutional upbringing in non-profit and public sector and from research.