

This thesis deals with the problem solving as a means of education for democracy. When students solve problems concerned with school or public life based on democratic principles, there the education for democracy is directly experienced with democracy. An important element of democracy at school is the student parliament which would promote active citizenship. For this reason the realized research concerns about student parliament and find out its influence on the students' ability to solve public problems.