

This thesis should be familiar to readers with the concept of basal stimulation and with people with heavy users. The practical part of the work will process the results of the questionnaires in the basic school Sluneční in Hostinném. This investigation will focus on the technical readiness of the respondents to work with the concept of the basal stimulation and on the application of this concept into the educational process, people with severely disabilities.

The aim of my work is to introduce the concept of basal stimulation as a very effective therapeutic method applicable to work with people with severely disabilities and to verify this by investigation.
