The bachelor thesis deals with accreditation of health facilities and its influence on the quality of provided care. It focuses on the influence of accreditation on provision of nursing care.

The theoretical part of the thesis deals with the importance of the quality of nursing care and with the systems of management which provide it.

The basis of the thesis is created by a qualitative research based on interviews with ward, chief and head nurses. These interviews were compiled on the basis of the quantitative pilot research. The ambition of my qualitative research is to explain the causes of cases when accreditation standards are not met and valid legislative is not abided.
