

Abstract

The thesis treats the history of the former military area of Ralsko between the years 1950–1968. It contains several chapters arranged according to their theme. They deal mainly with the resettlement of the civilians preceding the establishment of the military area, military training and encampments, organization system, life in the area etc. The thesis is based primarily on the archives of the Central Military Archive (mostly the resources provided by the Ministry of Defence) and also on other available writings. Besides, it works with oral history.

The BA thesis reveals new pieces of knowledge connected with the Czechoslovak military history as it focuses on a part of the Czech post-war history, which has so far remained unexplored.
