

This paper focus on research of bilingual Czechoslovak communication in the twogenerational family. The method of reconstruction of social networks and language biographies explains motivation for language choice of each member of the family. Transcripts of records of the family communication are focusing on the moment of the code switch and bilingual communication that takes place in the family. It is shown how much is family assimilated to the new environment, and how does it influence language situation in the family.