

Abstract

In this work basic concepts of epileptology are explained first. Next the issue of experimental study is pointed out. The rest of the work is then devoted to febrile seizures, their generation, spread and effect on the organism. Confrontation of seizures associated with increased body temperature and other experimental models are placed at the end.