Bachelor thesis „Research of occupational prestige in Czech society“ is focused on problem of occupational prestige. It tries to answer the question how the prestige scale reflects changes in society after the year 1989 and what these changes say about the social structure. In chapter one I work with terms – prestige, occupational prestige and social status. In the chapter two I speak about research realised in Czech society. Than I speak about occupational prestige scales and about the method of comparing the scales. I try to say what the target of these researches is. I characterize methodology and describe problem they can happen in research. In the third part I chronologically summarize Czech occupational prestige research results, I advert to some changes of occupational assessing and I explain projection of society changes into the prestige scale. In the last part I present my own research results. This research was realised in 2012. I demonstrate research specification. I think about putting occupation into the research and I compare it with the last year research results. In the deeper analysis In the last part I try to explain what are the aspect according respondents make their ranking.
