

Subjunctive, Indicative, subordinated clauses

The aim of this thesis is to give a brief summary of the usage of subjunctive in subordinated clauses, to divide the classification into cases when: a) the subjunctive is obligatory, b) the subjunctive is a stylistic choice, c) subjunctive and indicative change the meaning of the statement. In the main part the thesis should be concentrated on those forms (after impersonal expressions, verbs, conjunctions, in the sequence of tenses, in the indirect questions), where we can observe that the usage is changing. The exemplification should be grounded mainly in the on-line corpus of written Italian. The partial findings should be accompanied by an analytic comment.

At the end of the thesis the results should be organized and evaluated.
