

If we say "feminist theology", there raise unambiguously depreciating or ridiculous feelings in some people and enthusiasm for something new what represents an alternative for traditional conceptions in others. However, the feminist theology is not anything what you could grasp in a determined form. It is more like a term covering a wide range of ways, opinions, and approaches to theology which have in common only the fact that some of them take into account a "woman" theme.