

The bachelor thesis „Exodus of Jews from Poland to Israel in the years 1968–1969 and their subsequent fates“ deals with one of the most important wave of emigration in the modern Polish history. Anti-Semitism is introduced in the first chapter and it is followed by the description of historical development of Jewish population on the Polish territory. Then there is the description of reasons and consequences of the Six-Day War and its impact on the political development in Poland in the year 1967, subsequent anti-Semitic campaign and emigration. The Polish March events of 1968 are analyzed as the main factor of Jewish emigration. The most important part that was obtained by questionnaire method analyzes and compares attitudes of emigrants towards this issue.
