

ABSTRACT

This thesis contains school assessment of pupils in the Czech Republic and England with focus on primary education. It partly deals with European trends in education. In addition to theoretical basis the thesis is based on the results of analyzed research carried out in both countries. It consists from attitudes of pupils, their parents and teachers to school assessment.