

The main subject of this thesis is three development stages of eGovernment at USA, EU and Czech level. The aim of this thesis is to identify different trends and attitudes in the process of electronization of administrative agendas. It analyzes the relevant legislative documents and key initiatives, which contributed to the development of eGovernment at the local level of the examined regions. The last chapters of this thesis also contains a brief outline of the future of eGovernment.