

Summary

The methodology for investigation of drug-related crime is the topic of this thesis. There are a few reasons why I have chosen this topic. The issue of drugs, drug-related crime, drug addiction and also illegal drug traffic has become recently the worldwide problem which intervenes into many areas of human life and therefore we must constantly pay attention to it. Especially this fact, together with other reasons as my personal connection with drug issue (few-year-long involvement in the program focused on the primary prevention from drugs at secondary schools) made me to choose this topic.

My thesis is divided into 6 parts. In the first two chapters I define the general notions related to the drug issue and I provide with the division of drugs into groups under chosen criteria. For the better orientation in this issue I have listed the most common types of drugs with the description of their effect on the organism of humans.

In the third part of my thesis I focus on the criminal prosecution of drug offences and the historical development of the legal regulation of this issue. More deeply I analyze the Act No. 140/1961 Coll., the Criminal Act, as amended and the actual legal regulation governing the prosecution of drug offences, the Act No. 40/20096 Coll., the Criminal Code, as amended.

The fourth part of the thesis is dedicated to the most important part of the topic- to the methodology for investigation of drug crime. Regarding the wide scope of this topic I have not analyzed all aspects at the same level but I rather have decided to focus on certain parts which I have analyzed properly. Especially I have dedicated more space to search of premises, search of other premises and land and interrogations.

In the fifth part I have used the practice example, according to the criminal file to which I got an access. This example helps the better understanding of the theoretical part and it also allows comparing theory with practice.

The final part is dedicated to the brief overview of the drug prevention, especially the primary prevention because the prevention of drug addiction is a very important tool in the fight against drug crime.