

Abstract

The aim of the thesis is to describe and evaluate the general volunteering opportunities on the internet and describe volunteer experience in the operation, development and changes of the Open Directory Project (ODP) as an example of content management project. This thesis seeks to collectively map the issue capture and volunteering in the Internet environment. It specifies the sources and monitors the possibilities to participate in volunteer activities on the Internet.