

This thesis would like to describe expropriation as an institute of contemporary legal regulation. I decided to write about the expropriation from the view of the land law, because of the object of expropriation. My thesis is focuses on expropriation as interference of power in which the state agency issuing the constitutive act establishing the property right to the person completely different from the previous owner. I started my thesis with the short division of the constitutional bases of the institute property concentrating on land and expropriation, its legal conditions and emphasize differences from the others interferences with the property right in history. The purpose of my thesis is to define expropriation, try to interpret the law provisions, its position in the legal system of the Czech Republic and make a small confrontation by the legal regulations of foreign countries.
