

Abstrakt

This rigorous thesis contains an analysis and a description of occupations classified to preferred occupational categories. Currently I provide a detailed description of historical evolvement of preferences, particularly miner's occupations until the year 1955. Next legal area I have been concerned with is an origin and specification of occupational categories, their progressive enhancement (until the year 1988) leading to their abolishment in the year 1992. At the conclusion of my thesis I am dealing with the present legal situation in the sphere of awarding financial advantages to people performing occupations which (in the past) used to be classified to preferred occupational categories. I also pay attention to procedures applied by Czech social security administration within decision making about entitlements arising from occupations classified to 1st or 2nd occupational category.

In fine I would like to express thanks to Doc. JUDr. Margerita Vysokajová, CSc. from Charles University in Prague, Faculty of Law, who was a leader of my thesis and who gave me necessary tuitions and helping hand by choosing and providing of useful literature for treatment of this thesis. Further I would like to say thanks to JUDr. Jiří Tuháček and JUDr. Roman Lang, Ph.D. – my colleagues from Czech social security administration – for their consultations and willingness to give me useful advises during preparation and working on this rigorous thesis.
