

SUMMARY

This thesis deals with the theme of ethical problems and dilemmas we can meet when providing day care.

The basic ethical norms for solving these problems are presented in the first part. Chosen ethical problems and dilemmas of various cases of day care practice are described in the next part.

The attitude of the Law of Social Services as the basic legal norm for providing day care service in the Czech Republic follows each of the cases.

Afterwards, each case is considered in the relation to the Ethical Code of social workers in the Czech Republic. This code contains ethical principles and the rules of ethical behaviour of a social worker towards the client, colleagues, employers and society.

Then the care is judged from the point of view of some ethical theories.

Next, the real solving of the case and its assessment from the point of view of the ethical norms of treatment is presented.

The results of solving concrete situations are compared according to different ethical theories in the final part.

This thesis does not include a questionnaire because of the individual attitude to the client and the theoretical orientation of this work.

KEY WORDS

The Law Of Social Services, The Ethical Code Of The Social Workers In The Czech Republic, day care, social worker, health visitor, client, the contract of providing services, ethical problem, ethical dilemma, deontology, teleology, situation ethics, normative ethics, the ethics of virtue.