

Topic of the diploma thesis is „The family as a subject of social work in Czech Republic and abroad. Study of factors affecting the stability of marriage“. The theoretical part deals with changing the form of contemporary families. The aim of this thesis is to take a look at the family as a subject of social work; get acquainted with the current functioning of the family; to check what the difference is between the Czech Republic and Russia, and also to find out what factors affecting the stability of marriage and why we are constantly talking about the crisis of the family. The content of the practical part was the qualitative analysis of data, which were obtained with the help of prepared questionnaire. Diploma thesis may serve as theme and inspiration for social work with young and older families, and may be the basis for social assistance and consultancy.