

The subject of this work is an analysis of two plays by a medieval French dramatic Adam de la Halle. One of them is a pastorelle „The Play of Robin and Marion“, the second one is a comical revue „Play of the Greensward“. This work examines their structure, story, characters and topics and tries to place them into the historical, geographical and aesthetical context.