

This thesis focuses on the individual Roman villas along the Moselle, with their historical and geographical contexts. It also provides general information about Roman villas. The introductory part of the work deals with the localization of the Moselle and the definition of the investigated area, the next part is devoted to its historical development. The thesis includes the typology of Roman villas. The main part deals with specific individual villas along the Moselle. Theoretical knowledge is supplemented by my own photographs.