

This thesis deals with the development of mining and exploration work in the quarry Mastý, its engineering-geological and brief description of the geological development of the area including a description of the currently mined and nearest quarries. For my research was important aerial photographs, geological, hydrogeological maps and maps of mineral deposits. The work contains only my own images quarry. The work is documented in the current scope and direction of mining.