

My thesis deals with the legal regulations of divorce in the Czech Republic and in Austria. The thesis is divided except in six chapters, except for the introductory and final chapter. The subject of my thesis is the historical progress of the divorce legislation in both countries, the characterization of the divorce causes, divorce legal proceeding and hardship clause, but also the characterization of the legal relationship between children and parents after the parents' divorce and divorce rate. The main method is the comparative method, which compares aforesaid issues related to the divorce. The intention of the thesis is to express the differences and to find the common features of the regulations of the divorce in the Czech and Austrian law.