

This thesis is concerned with several novels published in the 1930s by the authors Yoshiya Nobuko and Saijō Yaso. First, I introduce short summaries of the authors' lives and general overview of their work in historical context. In the next part, I present the methodological base which will be used for study and comparison of four novels, originally published serially in the Shōjo Kurabu magazine.