

This master's thesis focuses on analysing personal narratives of refugee women in Belgium, with a special emphasis on the relationship between gender and migration, the particular asylum policy and its social effects. This is based on analysing seven narratives.