Abstract:

The dissertation occupies by the problems of the teaching profession. Despite big psychological and physical difficulty the profession is underestimated, prestige and salaries of teachers are low. One of the goals of the thesis is to show that the teaching profession isn't that easy as the public believes and to present its principal problems. The dissertation touches themes like prestige and authority of the teacher, teachers' health and stress at school or trainee teachers' problems.

Theme of the teaching profession generally is completed by actual numbers and data reflecting status of the teacher and education system in the Czech Republic, in France and in other European countries. So another goal of the thesis is to compare these numbers and to find advantages and disadvantages of systems which influence status of the teacher and to outline possible ways to their improvement. We occupy for example by the present problems of European systems, financing of education, teachers' salaries or status of the teacher in the Czech Republic and in France.

The dissertation is divided into 5 parts. Every part forms a thematic unit connecting theory to the present situation. We hope to contribute to the discipline by this connection of theory and figures concerning the teaching profession. We offer a complex view on status of the teacher in the Czech Republic and in France and we compare, on the basis of exact data, education systems in these countries.
