

This BA thesis is focused on the translation of selected parts and stylistic analysis of John Grisham's novel The Racketeer. Special attention is paid to the differences which originate while translating from the English language to the Czech language. The theoretical analytical part is mainly concerned with lexical and stylistic aspects but it is also contains the translation of national specific features and various peculiarities of graphical equivalence.