

Abstract

Zuzana Vernerová

SUBURBANISATION IMPACTS IN THE CZECH REPUBLIC

Young generation attitude to the ideal habitation

Faculty of Arts, Charles University in Prague, Department of Cultural Studies,
Rigorous Thesis, 111 pages, 2013

The Rigorous Thesis deals with holistic approach to the relation between human and landscape explored through the modern phenomenon of suburbanization from the culturological and ecological point of view. The major discussed topic contains the concept of sustainable development, it's evolution and urban impact. The teoretical part observes historical and cultural background of the relation and analyses closely the expansion of cities, urbanization, decentralization, and suburbanization. Second part surveys the young generation attitude to the ideal habitation issue and their relation to landscape by case study. The main task is to find out the opinion about the magnitude of the city and suburb areas growth. Besides the current young generation ideal of housing question, the sample of 360 respondents from all regions of the Czech Republic estimates possible development of future suburbanisation trends.

Key words: suburbanisation, sustainable development, landscape, culture and nature, ideal housing