

Abstract

Presented BA thesis „Early medieval kaptorga“ dealing with metal caskets which were worn on the neck by the women in the early medieval period and called by the archaeologists “kaptorgas”. This work summarises available archeological material together with the published finds of kaptorgas from Bohemia and Moravia. Introductory part of the work dealing with questions of origin, purpose and social status of women which wore them. The main part of this work contains typology a complete register of kaptorgas sorted by archeological locality. Detailed description and style analysis accompanied with pictures is the other important part of this work. The relevant information are arranged in synoptical table.