

This thesis aims to capture the fundamental factors of development of Czech breweries and their cartelization in period 1869 - 1918. It analyzes three big companies, which represent specific ways of organization. It analyzes especially the mechanisms of their business and financial results, technological level, organization of sales and cooperation in cartels. Cartels are discussed separately and mentioned is their importance for the development of the field in the period.