

Abstract

This rigorous thesis deals with the proceedings of custody of minors after their parents divorce or as a consequent of their brake-up if the parents were unmarried and did not make and agreement. The first part of the thesis focuses on the current legislation of substantive law, the second part describes the proceedings in detail and the last part focuses on the selected issues which should be discussed in detail. The conclusion sums up the negatives of the legislations and practical problems which often appears.