ABSTRACT:

The work is aimed at integration of people with disabilities into society. The aim is to capture and describe one of the most important parts in everyone's lives - integration not only in the class group but also approximation to the socialization into a whole society.

The thesis is divided into two parts. There are theoretical and practical parts. In the theoretical part we can find definitiv of cerebral palsy, its causes, incidence and forms. We also deal with socialization in different areas, which most affect the lives of respondents. The last component of the theoretical part is the issue of communication of children with cerebral palsy.

The practical part describes the methods and results of research which captures socialization of respondents, especially their perception of socialization. The research method is a structured interview with open questions.
