

Abstract (in English)

This bachelor thesis is devoted to the causes of placement of children in facilities for immediate assistance. It emphasizes the essential importance of family and family life on child development, and defines and evaluates the family function. It also addresses the most frequent causes of placement of children in facilities for immediate assistance and assesses the impact on children's development. The main practical section focuses on an analysis of the causes of placement of children in the facility for immediate assistance "Fond ohrožených dětí" from 2008 to 2014. The thesis concludes with a comparison of causes at the regional level.