

The topic of this bachelor thesis is how to use place and its aspects in social work. Author chose youth centre as a specific social service and describes its goals and means in first chapter. Second chapter describes needs and weaknesses of the children and youngsters who come to youth centre. Third chapter is dedicated to place and its aspects and how these aspects of place influence human experience and behaviour. Author explored the way how social workers use place and equipment of the youth centre during their work with clients in the rest of the thesis. This research took place in three youth centres in Prague. The bachelor thesis ends with summary of possible ways how to use place of the centre and its aspects in order to fulfill goals of this social service and needs of its clients.
