Abstract

Social and legal protection of children represents a set of specific activities consisting in the provision of child protection. Culture of Social Workers OSPOD is defined values that are shared by professionals in this field.

This thesis aims to illustrate the work of social workers through exploration of professional culture. Since the work of social workers covers wide range of duties, this thesis focuses on the removal of children from their families, as values of social workers in critical cases can be demonstrated within these difficult situations. Furthermore, from the professionals' perspective, this area is little known to the public.

Qualitative research strategy has been used to answer the research question: "What is the professional culture of social workers OSPOD?" This thesis presents initial results on professional culture through analysis of interviews with OSPOD employees from two departments and a case study, which is supplemented with two specific interviews with SOPOD employees.
