

One of the key tasks involved in processing of CT angiography image data is the vascular system segmentation. The aim is to provide an objective visualization of acquired data and thus make the diagnostics easier. This work aims at studying the methods used for segmentation of neurocranium vessels and implementing one of the existing algorithms in co-operation with radiodiagnostic department of Na Bulovce faculty hospital.