

Abstract

The submitted thesis deals with legislative process in Czech republic and is divided into two parts which consist of twenty chapters . First part analyzes lawmaking and legislative process generally and point out on some problematic aspects of lawmaking.. It describes beside other things position of the Parliament, the President and the Constitution court in legislative process. Thesis deals with bill and its adoption in the government. Further is described first, second and third reading in the Chamber of Deputies. This part contains also description of special legislative process, for example adoption the state budget and the final state account legislative. Autor draws inspiration from jurisprudence of Constitutional court and jurisprudence. Second part is focused on legislative process regarding Law No. 89/2012 Coll. Civil Code. Beside other things there is described some requirements on codex. Thesis analyzes legislative purpose and creation of Law No 89/2012 Coll. Civil code. It is described its introduction in The Chamber of Deputies by the government and and its consecutive approval by The Chamber of Deputies and The Senat.