

Abstract:

This bachelor thesis is focused on development of Czechoslovak-Turkish relations in the inter-war period and the depiction of Turkey in the journal Foreign Policy, which was published by Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Czechoslovak Republic between years 1920-1938. The first part of the thesis gives a summary of Czechoslovak and Turkish foreign policy. This chapter puts emphasis on events which had an influence on mutual relations and diplomatic representations. The second part of the thesis is an analysis of the view on Turkey in the journal Foreign Policy using methods of media analysis. The image of Turkey is divided into six blocks by their topic instead of chronological order.

The analysis aims to show to what extent the view on Turkey and mutual relations was changed during the pursued period and to indicate whether the view was within the journal unanimous or not.
