

Abstract

The main idea of the bachelor thesis is to provide documentary evidence for the supplies of weapons to the Middle East after the World War II. The attention will be focused on four states, Israel, Syria, Iraq and Egypt, which were important customers of the Czechoslovakian armaments industry. These states used weapons against each other in the following wars. The supplies were dependant on the political situation in Czechoslovakia and in the world and also on the relations among the politicians and those particular states.
