

ABSTRACT

The subject of this rigorous work is to investigate the political and legal aspects that influenced and lead to the formulation of the particular provisions in the Constitutional Charter of 1920. The work also offers juristic analysis of selected constitutional provisions in the context and, in some cases, in the form of comparison with previous laws and standards that implemented the provisions of the Constitutional Charter. We also focus on those constitutional laws, which have become a part of or amendments to the constitution.
