

Abstract

The bachelor's thesis analyzes the assessment of basic needs of children placed in one of the specific forms of foster care performed by the authority responsible for providing for the social and legal protection of children. The aim is to map the fulfillment of the needs of these children in a particular region and create an overview of the common problems encountered during evaluation phase and the identified needs of the individual child protection plan. The practical part consists of a presentation of research findings, aiming to propose a framework with a minimum set of measures which would allow to meet the needs of children in the given families.
