

This bachelor thesis describes the communication activities of Artbanka Museum of Young Art from 2011 to early 2013, when the institution ended its activities.

The work describes in detail the subject of AMoYA, its origins, objectives, promotion and risks associated with its activities. Much of the work is devoted to describing the elements of the communication mix and the elements that AMoYA had available as part of its promotional activities.