

Abstract

The thesis provides a comprehensive treatise on the institute of community property of spouses under current law, with an emphasis on its termination and settlement. The thesis analyzes particularly the ways of termination of the community property of spouses, which can occur with the dissolution of marriage or within its duration. It examines the subject of the settlement, the principles and methods of the settlement and also deals with selected specific situations in case of the settlement of defunct community property of spouses.

The thesis also deals with the institute of the community property of spouses according to the new legal framework effective from 1 January 2014, when it highlights the fundamental changes. And last but not least, the thesis compares Czech regulation of the community property of spouses and German regulation of the matrimonial property law.
