

This thesis is focused on information retrieval in the context of its historical development, it presents trends in integration of intelligent features in it, and thus the emergence of intelligent information retrieval. Individual intelligent elements are described in a separate chapter, following chapter then introduces their use, including specific examples. Thesis also traces research on the topic of intelligent information retrieval in selected institutions both in the Czech republic and abroad; results of this survey for Czech republic are presented in the enclosed search.